THE WILD WOMAN OF THE NAVIDAD.

About a year since an account was respecting a strange creature, whose another vein opened. tracks had been discovered on the banks of the Navidad, near Texana. The foot marks of this creature resembled those of a woman and a report was circulated to the effect that a wild-woman had made her retreat in the forest of the Navidad. Within a few weeks several attempts have been made to capture this singular being. Mr. Glascock pursued it for several days with dogs, and at one time ap proached so near it as to cast a lasso upon its shoulders. It however, with great adroitness cluded the snare, and fled to a dense thicket, where it could not be traced. Mr. Glascock states that he was near a small prairie eaclosed by the border forests of the river, when the creature emerged from the woods, and ran across the Thou hast all seasons for thise own, oh, prairie in full view. It was about Death !? prairie in full view. It was about five feet high, resembling a human being, but covered with hair of a reddish brown color. BOOK KEEPING -The study of Book coping is exhibitarating and elevating in its operation upon the mind. It prompts to honest industry, by strictly accounting for the fruits of daily enjoyment. It forms a cheek to the rash and indiscreet by holding a caricature of their own drawing in a blashing record of illdevised schemes. It expands the mind from the grovelling sycophaney of a pedlar to the lucid operations of the merchant, whose every sail wafts new luxuries upon the wings of every wind. It is a natural code of laws, which has grown with the growth of society! Sacred in the eyes of your Legislature; binding alike on all parties concerned; of daily, of hourly occurrence; indispensable to the man of extensive operations, and qually beneficial to him who seldom trades. It is a science without a knowlalge of which every man at times must bellawkward in social life; and without outting it in practice, must constantly be able to be wronged and wrong himself .education should be suited to the wants of the man, then Book keeping should be taught to all, for all men want a competeney to live by; and no property is su secure as that in which the owner trusts not more in its preservation to a treacherous memoon in a factorful and respected record. is had no other effect than its moral ten. enct, it would be of in stimuble value as

It fasters upon the mind the respect we ave to others' rights and bounden duty man owes to himself and his dependents. It prevents frauds, collisions and dispures. It points to justice, honor and hon-esty. It is a daily beacon prompting to fragality; and hourly admonisher of the turnous effects of sluggishness, carelessness and extravagance li expands the mindsusceptible of enlargement and regulates the will redired to confusion - Colt.
